staff man for that committee beginning the 7th of February.

THE CHAIRMAN: I am thinking in terms of not only getting the material, but then compiling that material, digesting that material and then coming up with an analysis of our own that actually does tell us what the existing types of governmental organization in the counties is, what the existing types of governmental administration we have in all of the various municipalities throughout the entire State and then a compilation of them, grouped together so we see what we are dealing with.

MR. RATCHFORD: There is one other factor, Mr. Clagett, that would be useful to you, I think, in this analysis. I would expect in this session of the Legislature, you are going to see legislation introduced in a number of counties to modify the authority which is possessed by the County Board, basically to enlarge it, as well as perhaps to make some modifications in the organizational structure of the county.

The feeling among many of the rural counties is that this is their last chance before reapportionment
