

1 over again and eventually you get a point of view and,
2 once you get a point of view, then I think you begin
3 moving in a direction of resolving them without too much 4 difficulty.

5 That then brings into focus the feasibility
6 aspect of the thing, notwithstanding how nice it would be,
7 is this something that is going to be acceptable? So that 8 I think we've got to always keep aware of the fact that 9 even though we might want to accomplish an article or 10 write an article that is along the line of a model con-
11 stitution, we nevertheless have got to consider whether 12 or not that is going to be accepted. It is simple enough 13 to write the article.

14 MR. MELVIN: Accepted by the people, you mean?

15 THE CHAIRMAN: Accepted by the convention. I
16 think the people are going to accept what the convention
17 comes up with. I think our job is really going to be with 18 the convention. I think, if I have gauged the tenor
19 accurately, the people are ready to revise the Constitu-
20 tion, but it is going to depend upon the reaction of the 21 convention itself. What way that is going to be done, it
