

1 suggested was considered by us at one time, and we ran 2 into all sorts of problems about what would happen if 3 you picked a judge, a sitting judge, and who agreed to 4 serve as the administrative judge, and he decided that 5 after being there for four or five years that he didn't 6 like it and he wanted to go back to being a judge. In 7 the meantime, someone had been appointed in his place to 8 take over his judicial duties. We couldn't quite figure 9 out what would happen.

10 JUDGE BRUNE: I suggest you avoid that very 11 simply by not having him an ordinary sitting judge to 12 begin with. He would be appointed directly as administra-
13 tive judge.

14 MR. ENEY: Don't you freeze him then?

15 JUDGE BRUNE: What of it? You want a man for 16 a career position.

17 MR. ENEY: Do you necessarily want the person
18 who is administering the entire trial court system to do 19 it for a period of 20 years maybe? Wouldn't he tend to 20 get wedded to his own administrative methods, perhaps,
21 and might it not be desirable to move on to the times?
