

1 Suppose he served unsatisfactorily. I think it would be
2 unfortunate to have him in for fifteen years. I think
3 there is another aspect to it, and that Judge Brune's
4 suggestion does cover. That is to say, that the judge
5 will be giving orders to other judges, and the sentiment 6 expressed at one meeting by a judge, not now present, was 7 that that person who is giving these orders should have the 8 prestige, the power and the background of the head judge
9 so he could give real orders. To come back to Massachu-
10 setts, the Chief Judge does it. It would seem to me this 11 is a pretty fair compromise, and whether you call him 12 administrative judge or not seems to be immaterial, if 13 the Chief Justice can appoint a judge to do the adminis-
14 tration, and who does it, and can be changed for cause;
15 that seems to me to cover the problem.

16 JUDGE BRUNE: May I make one or two comments
17 in reply to Judge Niles' suggestion? I have in mind pos-
18 sible qualifications for a person to be appointed adminis-
19 trative judge. He should have had some experience, either
20 as a trial judge or in court administration work. Now,
21 if he gets to doing his job badly and the question arises
