

1 the best statistical evidence available, could demon-
2 strate so that any court or jury in the land would 3 acknowledge that he was correct in showing that you
4 had a mistake, this constitutional provision protects 5 you from recognizing that mistake unless you want to.

6 DR. SENSENBAUGH: Well, I don't think that
7 a situation like that, a pointed mistake, would go un-
8 recognized.

9 MR. CASE: Well, the issue is not whether 10 you would or wouldn't recognize it. It is whether you
11 would have to recognize it, whether you could be re-
12 quired to recognize it.

13 DR. SENSENBAUGH: I think we're missing the 14 whole point of this provision. The purpose of that 15 provision means, it is designed so that the government, 16 the executive department cannot make major changes in 17 the coverage that the budget is supposed to give. I
18 think we are grabbing here at straws when we talk
19 about small figures and computations.

20 MR. CASE: Well, maybe they wouldn't be 21 small figures. They could be big figures.
