break the institutions
board.

I don't kno
or not, but once you h
it's hard to change an University of Maryland know that a change in remote, and I have no
of Maryland -MRS. BOTHE:

break the institutions down and give each one its own board.

I don't know whether this is a possibility or not, but once you have a constitutional provision, it's hard to change and we know that there has been a University of Maryland for a number of years and we know that a change in this is going to be somewhat remote, and I have no objection about the University of Maryland --

MRS. BOTHE: I was wondering about the secondary school systems.

DR. SENSENEAUGH: I know some of the educators have proposed that this ought to have some constitutional backing. I have no real strong feeling on this. Your experience in Maryland has been good, particularly since 1916, around that period, and the system has a good set of laws and, really, we are recognized across the country as having a very substantial legal structure here in Maryland for the operation of our schools.

There is a tendency to move in our direction.

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21