

1 the problem of the number of judicial personnel in a
2 court is entirely different and separate from the problem
3 of how you are going to structure the court system for 4 the next hundred years.

5 All of this was leading up to a question
6 that I wanted to get you thinking on. Assuming that we 7 want to upgrade the Orphans Court and the judges in it, 8 that is, the judges, not necessarily the incumbents, but 9 the judges who perform Orphans Court duties, and 10 assuming that we want to give it whatever advantages
11 may be gotten from a unified administration of a state
12 court system, what are the practical alternatives that 13 you would suggest as to how we might do the thing that 14 we both want to do? Are you suggesting that the present
15 Orphans Court judges be made Circuit judges in a 16 separate division? Are you suggesting that the Orphans
17 Court be frozen with its personnel as a separate court?
18 Are you suggesting that the Orphans Court be the only 19 separate such court throughout the state, a kind of 20 little island enclave? Or are you suggesting that the 21 Orphans Court should be preserved the way it was preserved