

1        been emotional. They were walking along the street.
2        Senator Toll said, this experiment that you are inaugurating
3        here today -- Senator Norris stopped in his tracks stone
4        still and stared at him. Mr. Toll realized that he had 5        committed some grievous error. I beg your pardon, Senator;
6        this demonstration. Well, that was all right.

7                    Another interesting sideline, what happens if 8        you make a change of this sort? I always thought this was 9        really amazing, that a man with the experience that 10        Senator Norris had could apparently be so completely 11        naive in his reaction to a situation such as this. The 12        vote was in November, naturally, in 1934. A month later, 13        the council of state governments had its assembly of the 14        states. They used to call it the interstate assembly, in 15        those days, and they are always held in Chicago now, but 16        in those days they met around in different cities and 17        that particular one was held right here, in this City at 18        the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

19                    I remember that I came down, as I frequently 20        did, to sit in on those meetings, at which the current 21        issues were discussed for the benefit of legislators in
