

1 which he passes upon education should have educational 2 standards. It should be educational standards, but in 3 another way, it should be set up and required for every 4 public official who in any way passes upon the processes
5 of education.

6 Furthermore -- and I won't take your time
7 this morning, and I can certainly say this without any 8 feeling whatsoever. My personal relationships with the 9 governors of Maryland and particularly with the legis-
10 lature have been most pleasant, but we have in Maryland, 11 according to a statement made to me by one of the most 12 distinguished judges that I have known in this State, is 13 that we have the most rigid executive budget, which 14 means that nothing can be put in the budget except those 15 things required by law, unless the executive approves 16 it; and if you want to raise one cent, for instance, the 17 salary of any individual in Maryland, in any position,
18 you've got to pass a special act of the legislature, 19 which means a terrific amount of control in the hands of 20 one or two individuals who often are advised -- and this 21 is quite impersonal -- who are often advised by people
