

1 as well qualified as anybody else and he can't go because 2 I have no money to pay the fees imposed by that group,
3 and yet I pay taxes.

4 Now, I don't know whether it is constitutional
5 or not, but in my book, it isn't. Logically, at least.
6 It may be, legally, but I don't believe that as a process,
7 as a matter of governmental function, that any child
8 ought to be denied that right.

9 MR. ENEY: How far would you go?

10 DR. PULLEN: I'd go just as far as the State
11 goes for one child as with another. That is a matter of 12 policy.

13 MR. ENEY: You said you would put in the 14 Constitution a guarantee that every child regardless of 15 his circumstances would be entitled to education in 16 college. Did you mean education through college? Did 17 you mean that in the sense that a child, regardless of 18 his capacity, mental capacity would be entitled to a
19 college education or the attempt to get one in the same
20 manner as a child is in grammar school, for instance?

21 DR. PULLEN: No, I'm using the word in a
