

1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8
9
10
11
12
13
14
15
16
17
18
19
20
21

DR. BARD: You said I could shoot at you.

DR. KUHN: Shoot away.

DR. BARD: On just one aspect of your statement, I was very much impressed, Dr. Kuhn, with your statement in regard to the necessity for clarifying the issue of academic freedom and the great importance in this connection. I am so glad that you made it. What I have in mind is this. It would certainly hold true, the whole matter of academic freedom would hold true equally for other higher educational institutions, as well as the University of Maryland and it would seem to me perhaps a statement of academic freedom at this level that would be broader than just applying it to the University of Maryland, but would apply broadly to the higher education that might have great value and then move on from there and make it clear that the bodies that are responsible for the various segments of higher education have the kind of autonomy which you have set forth.

What do you think of that?

DR. KUHN: Let me restate it again. I would