

1 families and parents to understand the importance of 2 this and to somehow get them to come in and to apply
3 to one or more of your institutions; and I believe that 4 the investments of time and effort in working or borrow-5 ing funds and repaying them is not too much to ask of 6 the student for higher education.

7 I don't believe in the very selective public 8 system in which you get your admission way up here and 9 you simply serve a few that you would like.

10 MR. ENEY: Let me ask you in one other area,
11 if I may, and this is apart from the University of 12 Maryland. I think the present Constitution deals almost 13 entirely with public education with perhaps one excep-
14 tion. It doesn't have any provisions encouraging private 15 education.

16 Do you think that it would be desirable,
17 particularly in the area of higher education, to have 18 either, one, constitutional encouragement of independent
19 colleges in private education or, two, more specific 20 constitutional assistance by means of tax exemption or 21 something of that sort?
