

1 complexity, the greater problems we are facing, I would 2 be inclined to have two scrutinies of every issue rather 3 than one. Checks and balances, I think there is a check 4 and balance that we have, it doesn't happen often, but 5 many times, if for only convenience, one house will pass
6 a measure knowing full well the other house will take a
7 better look at it.

8 This ought not be the only reason why we 9 should continue the two-house system, but until I have 10 been a product of or at least have seen more evidence of 11 the fact that a unicameral system works better than this 12 one, I personally would be inclined to continue with what 13 we have and it is only because I suppose most of us like 14 to keep the status quo. It's very easy to keep what we 15 have, but a little difficult sometimes to step into 16 something that you are unfamiliar with, and I think it 17 has worked well and I would hope that before it is 18 changed we have a little more precedent than just the 19 Nebraska background.

20 THE CHAIRMAN: We are glad to have Mr. Mandel
21 with us, Speaker of the House, and if you care to break
