¹ Originally elected a delegate to the Lower House, he was appointed to the Council on May 22, 1756.

² Williamson was chosen speaker of the Lower House on September 30, 1756, to replace the ailing Henry Hooper. On April 13, 1757, Williamson was reported ill, and Hooper was returned to the speaker's chair.

³ Buchanan was discharged on June 28, 1755, for acting as prosecutor in the Baltimore County Court.

⁴ A new election for a delegate from Annapolis was called for on September 14, 1756, to replace Bordley, who had accepted the offices of attorney general of the province and naval officer of Annapolis.

⁵ The Lower House members on all first session standing committee were reappointed to continue in the second through fifth sessions, except the Committee of Laws which ceased to function after the fourth session. The only names relisted in those sessions were the members on the Committee of Bills of Credit-Paper Currency. In the sixth session the members on the committees of Bills of Credit and Accounts were relisted; the members on the committees of Elections and Arms and Ammunition were reappointed, but not relisted; and the members on the Committee of Grievances were neither relisted nor reappointed, but functioned as usual. Therefore, the members on the Committee of Grievances in the first through fifth sessions were credited with continued service in the sixth. It is presumed that Edward Tilghman, Philip Hammond, and Charles Goldsborough, who were added to the Committee of Grievances at the end of the third session, were not included in the reappointment made during the fourth session, and that Charles Carroll, Barrister, who was added to this committee in the middle of the fourth session, was not reappointed in the fifth.
