doing violence to anything in the present draft.

I merely say that the ideas behind Articles 1 and 6 of the present Declaration of Rights are, as I read them, statements of principle of forcible revolution

MR. CLAGETT: I agree, Mr. Chairman, but that is where I feel I am getting pulled away from the point made by Mr. Case where, as I understood his point, it was not the philosophy as much as the preservation of the language.

THE CHAIRMAN: I will ask him again. thought.Mr. Case, you were advocating the philosophy of Sections 1 and 6 as well as the language.

language and not the philosophy although I pointed out that after Mrs. Bothe made the point which I really didn't make that this particub r substantive right was omitted in the draft of the Committee's report in Section 1.

MR. CASE: I am advocating primarily the

Let me state it again, as clear as I can, that I think what is being done here is to scrap the language which is part of the Maryland heritage and I say that
