

1 interpreted?

2 THE CHAIRMAN: Where?

3 MR. SAYRE: In the very last sentence.

4 DR. BARD: This would mean that, as we under-5 stand it, that the Supreme Court would have the power to 6 either review a plan that had been in existence or if 7 no plan were in existence, grant would permit it to 8 formulate one.

9 THE CHAIRMAN: I don't think lawyers would have 10 any difficulty with that phrase. It is a customary 11 phrase, Mr. Sayre, if I follow your question.

12 MR. SAYRE: Well, let's say there would have been 13 testing as to its constitutionality, does that mean the 14 draft does have the power to come up with his own proposal
15 which will be law, is that right?

16 THE CHAIRMAN: If it decides it has that power,
17 I would say so. It has decided that under the present
18 Constitution.

19 MR. SAYRE: That is what I thought. I thought 20 our idea was if there was no other course of relief that 21 it would have that power, and I don't know that this means
