

engendered at Easton as a result of long debate of which I played some part, and I know how I felt then and how I feel now. It is, very frankly, that the Governor, well, exactly what I said -- the idea, I think you have missed the point here, in getting the Governor's plan approved, get it off dead center. It is a proposal of motion rather than a proposal of substance. It never was my idea that this whole matter should be turned over in the first instance to the Legislature.

DR. BARD: This Committee stood for a blue ribbon committee earlier.

THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Claggett?

MR. CLAGGETT: Mr. Chairman, let us assume for the moment that the Governor does come up with a good plan. The General Assembly then decides they don't like it, and they come up with their plan. The Governor then vetoes the General Assembly plan, can't the General Assembly then override the Governor's veto?

THE CHAIRMAN: That would be possible under what Mr. Case suggests, and under what Dr. Bard is suggesting, it would not be necessary. Nobody questions the