

1 worthwhile considerations as Mr. Sykes has said, we are 2 still trespassing into a field where it seems to me we 3 are extending the courts outside of their proper sphere
4 of restrictive power and balance of power.

5 THE CHAIRMAN: The reason I said I didn't think
6 so is I do not think the Legislature undertakes to tell
7 the Governor how to set up his office or how to run it.
8 The Legislature certainly has the power to prescribe how 9 it functions in adopting its own rules, in deciding how 10 many doorkeepers it needs and where it is going to sit and 11 its hours and so forth. So that when you are talking about 12 Clause 3 in this Section, which is Administration of Courts,
13 you are talking precisely that; what hours they will sit 14 and what time they will recess and how long they have for 15 lunch and so forth.

16 Now, there is a substantial body of thinking
17 with respect to the problem that holds that the Courts 18 have the inherent power that cannot be taken away from 19 them to govern the admission to practice and to regulate 20 the persons admitted to the Bar. As you know, the regu-
21 lation has been a sort of hodgepodge. The Court of Appeals
