

1 has never taken a stand and stated it has.

2 As to practice and procedure generally, I think
3 you get into more of a twilight zone, but the closer you
4 are to mere detail such as the size of paper and the 5 procedure of the courts themselves, the closer you are
6 to the things that are in Item 3. The further away you
7 get from that, the closer you get to substantive law.
8 Mr. Mitchell?

9 MR. MITCHELL: Did I understand you to suggest
10 the Courts might have the inherent power to govern the 11 administration of persons to practice, even though this
12 Constitution might provide otherwise?

13 THE CHAIRMAN: I say there is a substantial
14 body of thinking that holds that is true.

15 DR. BURDETTE: Even against the Constitution?

16 THE CHAIRMAN: No. I thought you meant if this
17 Constitution were silent. Oh, no, I think the Constitution
18 would control. Mr. Sykes?

19 MR. SYKES: Mr. Chairman, in answer to Mr.
20 Clagett's point, I might say that the New Jersey Constitu-
21 tion, which is regarded as a model in this connection, gives
