

1 but as a practical matter, it seems to me if the feeling
2 of the Committee is divided on the base of 19 to 3, there
3 would be hardly anything we have had in our consideration.
4 We have had some unanimous votes, but a great many have 5 been much closer than that, and the work involved in pre-6 paring an alternate situation is not just to put it in 7 one paragraph. You would have to rewrite the whole
8 judicial act if we were starting out on the assumption
9 that that is what we are working on. It would not only 10 be a terrible task to impose on the hardworking subcom-
11 mittee, but they would have a disadvantage if we are 12 considerably anxious to have this plan in effect adopted
13 by the Constitutional Convention Committee, if they have 14 an alternate plan on this to pull out and say. Well, this 15 is the alternate Commission plan, and the work is all
16 done for them, and they will have a much better chance
17 of getting it through the Convention if we just leave a 18 period and not even give them an out. The minute you
19 begin writing these alternates unless it is a clearcut
20 thing involving one particular thing, I think it would be 21 a mistake.
