

1 that product being somewhat similar to the one we are 2 working on trying to produce now being more easily sold
3 to the people. When that time comes, I believe that,
4 and notwithstanding there is some validity to the state-
5 ment Mr. Bond made a while ago, that your representa-
6 tion from each of the districts would be closer to the 7 people, I don't feel that that has any real merit in 8 today's means of communication, television, radio,
9 good roads, access, easy communication generally.

10 So that within the boundaries of the county
11 you certainly have the representation of all points
12 of view going into anybody who lives in that county.
13 Any individual living in a county today is fairly 14 representative of the thinking of that county rather 15 than worrying about splitting it up into segments by 16 way of the legislative districts. Therefore, all 17 factors considered, I think that where we are dealing 18 with a special subject, one that does require special 19 qualifications, we would be better off going ahead and 20 drawing from that county as a whole rather than from 21 the special areas.
