

1 have the power not to submit a whole new Constitution.
2 Section 13 says if a new Constitution or change or 3 amendment of the -- it could do any of those things.

4 The language referring to the Attorney
5 General's duty to determine the appropriate titles takes 6 into account the fact that, one, they might submit a whole
7 new Constitution or, two, they might submit a series of 8 amendments, in which case he would have to give several 9 titles, one for each proposed amendment. The Attorney
10 General --

11 DR. BURDETTE: That answers it but with 12 that answer, I suggest the language ought to be clear 13 because on top of Page 11, third line, there is 14 language by whom it shall then be submitted. As if it
15 were one single question, yes or no.

16 MR. SCANLAN: The "it" refers back to 17 either a new Constitution, a change, or amendment.

18 THE CHAIRMAN: Mr. Scanlan, I think
19 implicit in Dr. Burdette's question is the idea that you
20 might have a new Constitution, not a change or amendment
21 of existing Constitution but one which the Convention
