

1 example.

2 MR. CASE: And that is all. Under the
3 Section 13 apparently this could go forward as an amend-4 ment to the existing Constitution. My question is 5 this. Is this a valid way to do it in view of the fact
6 that the present Constitution would still be in force 7 and effect and Article 14, Section 2, deals with the 8 method of amending the Constitution. Unfortunately,
9 the Convention which this bill envisages will not be 10 the Convention that Section 2 of Article 14 talks 11 about.

12 MR. SCANLAN: I think you are sneaking
13 around to your perennial objection, I won't say objection,
14 your skepticism about the legality of the Convention
15 itself.

16 MR. CASE: No, this is a different point.
17 The point is assuming the Convention is perfectly 18 legal and valid to produce a new document, but they for 19 some reason don't come up with a new document, as this 20 section suggests they might not, but only come up with 21 an amendment. Now they are going to propose an amendment.
