

1 And that's all. The present Constitution says that an
2 amendment can be proposed by Convention but the Conven-
3 tion that the Constitution talks about is an entirely
4 different type of Convention composed of different
5 people and set up in a different way than this Convention
6 would be. I am questioning now whether or not the 7 amendment would be a valid amendment, whether it would 8 be meaningful.

9 MR. SCANLAN: I think the greater includes 10 the lesser and if one accepts the assumption, the 11 Legislature has inherent power to convene that Convention
12 and delegates who go there to serve in it are acting
13 within powers, acting within the scope of constitutional
14 authority and exercising inherent right of the people
15 to change their constitutional form of government, if 16 they can change it completely, I think they can change
17 it in part.

18 MR. CASE: I don't have with me the opinion
19 of the Attorney General you recall was given to the 20 Governor before the appointment of this Commission. You
21 will recall that that opinion of the Attorney General
