

1 as the other provisions in the new Constitution regarding
2 education. Now, there was considerable sentiment
3 expressed that the, that not only should the budget pro-
4 visions be retained but that the substance of Section 3 of 5 Article VIII that the school fund be inviolate should also 6 be retained in the new Constitution. Then there was 7 sentiment expressed regarding the State Board of Education
8 and the State Superintendent of Public Schools. There is 9 no mention whatever made of them in the current Constitu-
10 tion, and there was some feeling that they should be 11 recognized, and their means of selection placed in the 12 Constitution.

13 Third was that the University of Maryland and 14 its Board of Regents, be given constitutional recognition,
15 and of course, that will be gone into with some debate, 16 I think, this morning. It was also suggested, and I might 17 say that the question of autonomy for the other institu-
18 tions of higher learning of the State was not dealt with as 19 comprehensively as it should have been in our earlier 20 Report. Since July, we have had considerable occasion to 21 review the situation with regard to the Government and higher
