words, and I think we better leave it to the Committee on Style. It is just a question of whether the last phrase providing that, classes, includes, property devoted to agricultural use, means that that is included within one of the previous classes.

MR. SYKES: Mr. Chairman, there is a little more than a question of style, because you use, classes, and subclasses, up above, and here you say, such classes may include property devoted to these things, and the provision may be read to mean that there has to be a unitarian class to property devoted to agricultural use. You can't subclassify within that class, and I think it is important to talk about the basis of classification rather than what the classes do.

THE CHAIRMAN: Well, do you have any specific language to suggest? You can't do it by substituting the word, classification, for classes, because you wouldn' say, classification may include.

MR. SYKES: This may be a last gasp, I made a suggestion, and it didn't get a second, what I mean is, that such classification may be based as provided by law on the agricultural, or open spacesuse of the property.
