

1 I would like to make one further comment, and that is to 2 say that trailblazing is fine, if we know what is at 3 the end of the trail. The political scientists will tell 4 us when they get their turn what is at the end of the 5 trail. I suggest to you what they say has not been borne
6 out in the heat of battle except in a very limited number 7 of cases. I suggest they should not be decisive in our 8 deliberation.

9 The second point I make is to discuss this 10 question of reapportionment. I think my views on that 11 subject are not entirely unknown since I have had occa-
12 sion to comment on them before. The adoption of reappor-
13 tionment does not obviate the necessity of a bicameral
14 Legislature the way I see this problem. There are 15 definite merits to the areas which are the least populated
16 in having two Houses. If I may relate it to statistics
17 in my own case, for example, my own County, we would have 18 one senator who would be representing our interests out
19 of 43. We would have two members of the Legislature
20 out of 143. To this extent we would consider the right 21 to have one out of 43 as a check against the two out of
