

1 to a committee tend to be the maximum amount of change.
2 There are very few and rare exceptions where a convention
3 considers questions that involve more changes than are 4 encompassed in a report to a convention.

5 For that reason, I think, personally, that it
6 is very important that the Commission consider not 7 just having in its work book a unicameral document and 8 the supporting papers for a particular viewpoint of that 9 nature, but that it do more than that if it really feels 10 that the subject of unicameralism deserves any significant 11 attention by the Convention itself. I think it does 12 deserve that amount of attention. Only this Commission
13 can really give it the attention and cast the light on it
14 that would acquire that kind of regard in the Constitu-15 tional Convention. Moreover, I wanted to mention, in 16 regard to the research our staff has done, that it is 17 interesting to note the conference committees were only 18 used on two occasions in the last Legislature for which 19 that information is available, 1965, that the amount of 20 second review, so to speak, of legislation passed in one 21 House after it is sent to the other House amounts to
