DR. WINSLOW: Isn't it true that the New York Port Authority is not only regional, it is intrastate, interstate, and that it does not have power to tax but that it is effective entirely?

THE CHAIRMAN: Again you would have to put the effective in quotes. There are a lot of people who say effective to a certain extent but not as effective as it might be.

MR. MARTINEAU: Going on, commenting on the effectiveness aspect, this problem has been cured by the provisions which don't give the authority the power to tax but which require the local county to impose a tax to raise the money specified in the budget of the authority such as with the Sanitary District and the County Commissioners have to impose a tax in the amount designated by the authorities. I don't see the power to tax is necessarily or is necessary to an effective authority.

MRS. BOTHE: I think we are off the track.
