of not more than 150 would constitute any one -- well, if we have two houses, I would like to have it just the way we have here, 43 for the Senate and 150 for the House, and if it were one body, just 150.

THE CHAIRMAN: I don't recall who spoke in opposition to this before, and I don't want to have a prolonged debate, but I think both points of view should be stated.

JUDGE ADKINS: I spoke in opposition. I think what you are doing, as I said at the last meeting, by this is arbitrarily deciding at this stage that the smaller counties will, after the 1970 census, have no representation. Whether they should or should not have in terms of strict per capita apportionment is a matter that this Commission has not debated. It is a matter that is open to serious debate and challenge, and I submit should not be foreclosed by this kind of a limitation. Statisticians which were brought to this Commission by the Committee at its last meeting clearly indicated that if you impose the limitations suggested here, with the projected growth of the State after the 1970 census,
