

1 solved by unicameralism. Having a skeptical mind on 2 that subject, I might say I found Dr. Winslow had 3 written a book or issued a supplement to annals on 4 subject of legislative committees, as I recall, it
5 been thirty years, I felt that nobody had ever gone
6 the question in any state as to exactly what happens
7 over a long period of time in resolving the difficulties
8 between Houses of Legislature. Not even Senator [redacted]
9 had done so.

10 I wrote my master's thesis on it. The [redacted] 11 is published in one of the digests, in one of the 12 issues of American Political Science Review. In [redacted]
13 state there was almost no doubt at all that disagree-
14 between the Houses of Legislature was engineered 15 order that the disagreement could be settled at the 16 last moment by senior members who were appointed 17 conference committees. I have generally been told 18 this has not been a problem in Maryland. I know of 19 no one who has researched it. I should think this 20 quite central. We are really raising the question
21 to whether or not this is responsive.
