49. MORGAN, JOHN. "Secure he stands, his front undaunted shows, | Alone he combats, 'midst a host of foes, | Far more than death, he dreads a sully'd name, | And if he dies, would close his death with fame." | To the Citizens and Freemen of the United States of America. | It was well said by a certain illustrious Chief to his King, on | taking his leave:—"I go to fight your Majesty's enemies, | in the field, I leave you Sire, to contend with mine at | home." . . . [signed] John Morgan. | Philadelphia, October 1, 1778. | [ornamental rule] | Baltimore: Printed by M. K. Goddard. [1778].

Folio. Double columns, printed on both sides.
Leaf measures: 12½ x 7½ inches.

A defense of John Morgan, former Director-General of the Hospitals and Physician in Chief to the American Army, who was dismissed from his position without trial by Congress on the charge that the sick suffered from neglect and mismanagement on his part during the campaign of 1776. He warns the public against "this many-headed monster of slander and licentiousness, ever glutting, never satiated, that trampling down all before it, seizes and mangles the characters of such distinguished persons as present, and like a giant refreshed with wine, rises with new vigour from its sordid repast" and invites all who have anything to present against his conduct to appear before the Congressional investigating committee with their evidence.
