

1791

1 Amicable society, Baltimore.

Amicable society, / [ornamental rule,] / As the most minute attention to every sentiment of politeness and decorum is absolutely necessary to render public as well as private societies agreeable, the managers flatter / themselves that it is unnecessary to urge the strictest observance of the following rules; the / slightest deviation from which, they beg leave to observe, will not pass unnoticed. / [39 lines of text containing 17 rules of the society,] Baltimore, November 25, 1791. // [Baltimore, Printed by W. Goddard and J. Angell? 1791,] broadside. 33 x 31 cm.

Ornamental border.

Not in Evans.

MdHi.

2 [double rule,] / ...The / Baltimore daily repository. / [rule,] / Vol. I. No. 1. Monday, October 24, 1791. / Vol. I. No. 60. Saturday, December 31, 1791, [colophon:] Baltimore: Printed by David Graham, at the new printing-office, in Calvert-street, between / Market-street and the Court-house; where subscriptions, advertisements, essays, articles of intelligence, &amp;c. are thankfully received. / [index,] Town-subscribers are served early on the morning of publication, and forwarded to those at a distance as they may direct. // [1791,]

4°. 28 cm. 1 folded sheet, 3 columns to the page, in each number.

Issued daily, except Sunday.

Evans 23144.

MdBP. For other copies see Prigham.

3 Baltimore, December 10. Further particulars of the late unfortunate conflict between the brave little army, under the command of the gallant General St. Clair, and a desperately ferocious body of savages, vastly superior in number. Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Kentucky, to his friend in this town, received last evening. "Lexington, November 10, 1791. Dear Sir, I had fourteen days passage on the Ohio and arrived here the 4th instant ... A man ar-