

advertiser of September 22, 1794, as "This day is published ... Paddy from Cork, or a comical and entertaining dialogue, between English Tom and Irish Tague, price 11 d".

Evans 26798.

No copy located.

163 Conversation cards: containing a variety of amusing, entertaining, and innocent questions in the art of courtship.

Baltimore: printed and sold at the office of the Baltimore daily intelligencer, in Calvert-street, near the Court-house. 1794.

Advertised in the April 1, 1794 issue of the Baltimore daily intelligencer, as "Just published, and for sale at the office of the Baltimore daily intelligencer ... price, one quarter of a dollar per pack ... Each pack contains 64 cards, 32 in black ink, and 32 in red ink, to distinguish the questions from the answers. These cards may be played by any person, as the answers are indiscriminately apropos to the questions without the trouble of arranging them.

Evans 27027 (entered under Fryer & Brown).

No copy located.

164 De Foe, Daniel, 1661-1731.

Robinson Crusoe, for children.

Baltimore: Published by George Keatinge, Second-street, 1794.

Advertised in Edwards's Baltimore daily advertiser, April 2, 1794, as, "Just published, price 3d ... A small edition of Robinson Crusoe, for children, adorned with cuts."

Referred to in a letter from George Keatinge to Matthew Carey of Philadelphia, written from Baltimore on February 2, 1794 (quoted in Mason Locke Weems, his works and ways, v. 1, p. 5) "Has at press here a small edition (for children) of Robinson Crusoe."

Evans 26864.

No copy located.

165 The / Democratic songster: / being a collection of the newest / and most admired / republican songs, / interspersed with many originals. / To