

[double rule] / Quatuor tempora. / [first column
begins] Vere, 25, 27, 28 Febr. / [Estate, 27, 29,
30 Maii. / [second column begins] Autumnno, 16, 18,
19 Sept. / Hyeme, 16, 18, 19 Dec. [second column
ends] / [double rule] /
Baltimori: / Typis Johannis Hayes. // [1800]

16°. 16 cm.

Pages: [24]

Signatures: [A]⁴, B⁴-C⁴.

Parsons 219.

DGU.

566 Chase, Jeremiah Townley, 1748-1828.

... Would it not be an extraordinary thing, in the organization of a national government that the legislature should not possess the power of providing for the common defence and general welfare?

... An alien has no right, interest, lot or part in our government, he has no claim to any of the immunities or privileges conferred by, or resulting from it; they belong exclusively to the citizens

... An alien friend, as long as he is permitted to remain in the territory of the United States, owes a temporary allegiance to the government, and is entitled to the protection of the laws, may acquire property in goods and chattles, and is capable of taking, but not of holding real property. By the law of nations, every government has the power to order aliens to depart out of its territory. Annapolis? Printed by Frederick and Samuel Green? 1800.

broadside.

G. Duvall, in his article, "To the freemen of the Fifth district of Maryland," published in part in the Federal gazette and daily advertiser of October 10, 1800, refers to "the observations of my worthy competitor, Mr. Chase, in his hand bill of the 2d instant."

No copy located.

567 Chesterfield's impenetrable secret; or, the mysterious puzzle.

Baltimore: Printed by Warner and Hanna? 1800.

Title from the Telegraphe of November 8, 1800:
"Just published and for sale ... Chesterfield's