CIRCULATION

While the number of visitors during the fiscal year 1950 did not equal the total for the fiscal year 1949, it did exceed that for any other year. It is difficult to know why the total should have dropped at all, but it is possible that fiscal year 1949 saw many researchers and historians who had postponed their visits or set them forward in order to spend part of the Tercentenary year in Annapolis. The Tercentenary, of course, brought many more tourists and casual visitors to the Hall of Records than is usual but only working visitors are counted—that is those who call for the use of materials preserved in our vaults—we do not attempt to count those who see our exhibits.
