

There were others who may be of interest to you: William T. Alderson, Executive Secretary, Tennessee Historical Commission; Sidney H. Aronson, who is writing A Study of Political Figures, 1800-1837, for the Ph.D. Degree at Columbia University; Rosamond R. Beirne, historian of Maryland architects and architecture; Howard V. L. Bloomfield, maritime historian; Winston Broadfoot, Curator of the Flowers Collection, Duke University Library; Mrs. Irving Brown, historian of Protestant Episcopal Parishes in Prince George's County; Mary G. Bryan, Archivist of Georgia; Philip L. Cannon, Clerk of the Circuit Court for Dorchester County; Frank A. Combs, St. Mary's County Delegate to the General Assembly; Paul S. Clarkson, attorney, and biographer of Luther Martin; George H. Callcott, Department of History, University of Maryland, at present writing the history of the University; Kenneth L. Carroll, Professor at Southern Methodist University, and historian of Maryland Quakers.

Also, Elizabeth C. Childs of the Lamination Division, South Carolina Archives; Clayton B. Dekle, Tennessee State Architect; LeRoy DePuy, Records Management Specialist, Bureau of Management Methods, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; Jean Muir Dorsey, genealogist of the Dorsey and Gist families; Leon deValinger, Archivist of Delaware; Ernest M. Eller, Director of Naval History, Office of the Chief of Naval Operations; Charles E. Fenwick, President, St. Mary's County Historical Society; Reverend A. Gordon Fischer, Rector of St. John's Church, Kingsville; James W. Foster, Director, Maryland Historical Society; William Rea Furlong, historian of American Flags; Francis X. Gallagher, Baltimore City Delegate to the General Assembly; Clarence P. Gould, historian of Christ Church, Kent Island; Reverend Robert B. Gribbon, Canon, Trinity Cathedral, Easton; Bruce C. Harding, Archivist and Head, Archives Division, Ohio Historical Society; Marvin E. Harvey, historian of "The Wesleyan Movement and the American Revolution."

Some others were Mrs. Harold Hayes, Librarian, Maryland and Rare Book Department, University of Maryland; J. R. Heller III, author of The Growth of Democracy in Maryland, 1790-1810; John M. Hemphill II, Professor of History, Southwestern College at Memphis, Tennessee; Hector J. Herbert, S.J., historian of the Arcadians; Mrs. Truman E. Hinton, historian of Protestant Episcopal Parishes in Prince George's County; Frank L. Howard, author of a history of All Saints Parish, Calvert County; Wilbur H. Hunter, Jr., Director of The Peale Museum;