

influential member, besides giving status to the Commission. He was also a regular attendant at meetings. He will be replaced for the present by Mr. George R. Lewis, Secretary of the General Services Department. Mr. Lewis thus far has manifested an interest in our work and I see no problem in this new arrangement. However, a reading of Chapter 97 will indicate to you that many of the policy decisions formerly cared for by the Commission are now allocated to the Secretary. At the next meeting of the Commission, I am hopeful that Mr. Lewis will explain the details of this new arrangement of State government.
