

district shall ride over and inspect the public roads in their respective districts, and the said commissioners shall advise and instruct the said supervisors as to the manner in which the said roads shall be mended and repaired, and when they are to be widened, and the order of time in which this work is to be done.

SEC. 4. And be it enacted, That the said road supervisors shall employ five laborers not above the age of fifty and not under the age of twenty-one, to work with him on the public road in his district. He shall keep an accurate account of the exact hour at which each laborer begins his work, and the number of hours he is engaged therein each day he is so employed, and he shall be present with said laborers the entire time, directing and assisting them, and at every monthly meeting of said board of road commissioners he shall submit to the said board the account required to be kept as aforesaid, and make oath, to be administered by one of said board, that the said account is a true statement of the exact number of hours each laborer was engaged in active work on the public roads in his district during the preceding month, and that he was present with said laborers the entire time they were so engaged; and if, for any reason, the said supervisor is compelled to be absent during the time the said laborers are engaged in work on said roads, in the monthly statement to be submitted to the board of road commissioners as aforesaid, he shall state the number of hours he was so absent, with the reason for such absence, and if he shall fail to keep and produce at said monthly meeting an account, as above provided for, or if any account so produced shall contain any false statement, or if the said supervisor shall fail to perform all the duties herein required of him to the satisfaction of said board of road commissioners, he shall be at once dismissed from his position by said board and forfeit all pay then due him for his services as road supervisor.

Number of laborers to employ.

Make oath to account.

State reason for absence.

SEC. 5. And be it enacted, That the work on said roads shall begin on the first Monday in April, and cease on the fifteenth day of October of each year.

When to begin work.