

PROFESSOR KELLY MILLER.

Professor Kelly Miller is Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of Howard University, and is thus placed in charge of nearly four hundred college men. This gives him a unique and conspicuous position in the educational world.

He is native of South Carolina, a graduate of Howard University, a sometime graduate student of Johns Hopkins University. As writer for newspapers and magazines, he has made substantial contributions to discussions of the race problem. He is author of "Race Adjustment," "Out of the House of Bondage" and joint author of "From Servitude to Service." Professor Kelly Miller contributed an important chapter on negro education for the Bureau of Education, and has published over one hundred thousand pamphlets bearing upon racial discussions. The most famous of these was "As to the Leopard Spots." Professor Miller is in great demand on the lecture platform before both white and colored audiences and his works are cited as authority both in Europe and America.
