

GEORGE T. BOWEN, (Right)

Entertaining

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON

at his Summer Home, Highland Beach

Born in Calvert County, Maryland, June, 1848. Died Dec. 31, 1910. His father, Captain George Bowen, although a slave, commanded a sloop, sailing to and from Calvert County to Baltimore. Young George came to Baltimore and enlisted in the United States Navy as a mess boy, serving under Admiral Donaldson. With this experience he later became steward of Baltimore's famous Atheneum Club, formerly at northeast corner of Charles and Franklin Streets. The Baltimore Club, the Merchants Club and the Democratic Club were later added to his stewardship. He was famous for the terrapin he prepared and shipped as far as Paris, France.

He served many times on the Grand Jury.

He married Martha Ann Thomas and is survived by seven children:

Nannie B. Brown, George T. Bowen, Jr. of New York, Marion B. Aldib, Martha B. Warsoma, Alexander Bowen, Evelyn B. White, and Edna B. Newton.
