The church in Lord Biddulph is one of the few remaining medieval churches in the area to have survived in its original form. It is a fine example of the Norman style, with a large tower and a spacious nave. The church was built in the early 12th century, and its architecture is typical of the period. The church has a number of interesting features, including a fine Norman archway and a large stained glass window.

The church has been in continuous use throughout its history, and it remains an active place of worship today. It is a popular destination for visitors to the area, and it is open to the public for tours and services.

The church is located on the outskirts of the village, and it is easily accessible by car or on foot. It is a peaceful and tranquil place, and it is a reminder of the rich history and culture of the area.