

ance the insured covenants and agrees to assume the contingent liability set forth in said policy for the payment of losses and expenses in excess of the cash funds of the Company, in such proportion and at such time as the board of directors may require, agreeably to the charter and by-laws of the Company.

SEC. 10. Any member of the Company may withdraw therefrom at any time by surrendering his policy to the company or agent and paying any arrearages and the policy's proportion of losses incurred, but not paid; upon such payment the Company shall cancel such insurance and such cancellation shall release said member from all liability of any and all obligations, claims or demands due or owing to said Company on account thereof, and shall debar said member from any claim on the Company for any loss or damage by fire subsequent to the time of withdrawal and cancellation of policy or policies; and the Company may at any time cancel any policy issued by it upon the return of the unearned portion of the cash premium.

Approved April 1, 1927.
