

ment is pronounced; and said Trial Magistrate may make such orders and impose such terms as to costs, recognizance for appearance or matters relating to the residence or conduct of the defendants as may be deemed proper; and said Trial Magistrate may also make such orders as to the supervision of the conditions of suspension as may be deemed proper; provided that any such action taken shall be duly recorded on the Magistrate's Docket. Said Trial Magistrate at any time during the period of suspension or probation, and after notice to the probationer or person accused, and after full opportunity to him to be heard either in person or by counsel, may alter, enlarge, modify or change any one or more of such conditions, and may add other conditions of suspension of sentence or probation.

In the event any of the conditions imposed are violated for failure of compliance with said condition, the Trial Magistrate may revoke the suspension and impose sentence.

Where the term of office of the Trial Magistrate by whom the matter was originally heard has expired or where said Trial Magistrate has been removed from office, has died, resigned or has otherwise become incapacitated, then his successor in office shall have full power and jurisdiction to hear and determine any violation of the conditions aforesaid and to impose sentence as fully and completely as if the case was originally brought before said successor.
