They should be properly marked, if not already, by road signs and that the high schools in each community be directed by the State Board of Education to set aside time in history and English instruction to collect any stories, anecdotes, history, traditions, folk lore, books and pictures, also local songs and poetry dealing with these engagements and other Civil War events; have said material organized and neatly written up in essay form; the best of which are to be filed with both local and state historical societies or libraries; and be it further

Resolved, That the State Board of Education be requested to formulate plans for programs to be held in all the public schools of Maryland during the Antietam Commemoration Year 1962, as a part of the State's celebration of the Civil War Centennial; and be it further

Resolved, That by ~~governmental~~ GUBERNATORIAL proclamation, the year 1962 be designated as the Antietam Centennial year in Maryland; that Maryland emphasize heroic sacrifices for deep convictions, unity, goodwill, toleration, peace and brotherhood and point to the fact, as Bruce Catton says, the Civil War was an opening of an era rather than the closing of one—not an ending, but a beginning—a time from which we made a fresh start. The Civil War is still going on as a struggle for liberty and for making liberty work in democracy, a government of the people; and be it further

Resolved, That a committee of nine, three from the House, three from the Senate and three appointed by the Governor to represent him, be created to suggest plans to the next 1961 session of the Legislature as to how these objectives and other Civil War objectives may best be realized.

Approved April 28, 1959.
