The above are some of the works procured by this means. Any lawyer knows that they are of the highest value, and form a most desirable addition to our Library. The State's Reporter furnishes the State Library with two hundred copies of the Maryland Reports. The State thus secures to its officer the sale of that number of volumes and payment therefor; and takes the risk itself of disposing of the volumes which may remain over the number required for its offices. It does this, it is presumed, because it is of interest to the State, in the work to be performed for its use, to secure the service of a respectable member of the legal profession by paying him adequately therefor. Almost from the
