

Hoping that your honorable body will adopt some measure which will relieve the fears and anxieties of many of your fellow-citizens, and throw an effective safeguard around all who may be so unfortunate as to fall into the hands of these agents and become subjects in their prisons—Your memorialist would be in duty bound, respectfully pray.

ANDREW B. CROSS.

Baltimore, Feb. 3d, 1858.

The first of the two questions which I have the honor to receive from the committee of the Senate, is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?" The second is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?"

The first of the two questions which I have the honor to receive from the committee of the Senate, is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?" The second is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?"

The first of the two questions which I have the honor to receive from the committee of the Senate, is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?" The second is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?"

The first of the two questions which I have the honor to receive from the committee of the Senate, is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?" The second is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?"

The first of the two questions which I have the honor to receive from the committee of the Senate, is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?" The second is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?"

The first of the two questions which I have the honor to receive from the committee of the Senate, is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?" The second is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?"

The first of the two questions which I have the honor to receive from the committee of the Senate, is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?" The second is, "What measures should be taken to prevent the escape of fugitives from the State?"