

REVISOR'S NOTE: Art. IV, §22 of the Constitution provides for reservation of a point or question for decision by the judges of a circuit (or three of them) sitting in banc. The decision of the court in banc is conclusive as to the party who moves for reservation of the point or question, but the adverse party may appeal it. This subsection simply restates the constitutional provision with respect to appeal. While not strictly necessary, the revisor believes it useful. Reference to the matter here is a convenience to the user. Procedural provisions are found in Md. Rule 512.
