

to the education process and are not used directly for it, are financed by revenue bonds paid for by student fees, and not by State general obligation bonds. This is presently the case at the other State Colleges, and I believe it would be most unwise to depart from that policy, especially in light of generally similar projects now being planned at other State institutions.

With respect to Items J1(j), (k), and (l), these appropriate very small amounts for projects that are required to be submitted by the Maryland Historical Trust to the Department of State Planning and other agencies for review and comment. This procedure was not followed in this instance, and I am advised that there is some question as to whether these projects would qualify for inclusion in the General Construction Loan in accordance with established criteria. Without commenting on the merits of any of the three appropriations, I believe it is unwise to circumvent the established procedures of review in these cases.

Sincerely,
/s/ Marvin Mandel
