

129
told Doory that the Deponent was some your deponent asked Doory what he could do for him for what he sent the him for or words to that effect & your Deponent faith that no person persuaded him to make this Will as your Deponent knows of But that Doory gave instructions to your Deponent to write that he the said Doory gave all that he had or what he had or wores to that purpose to his wife Edinor Doory and his Brother Owen Quigley and his son John Quigley But that your Deponent had no fault draught of the said instructions But that he your Deponent was about half an hour in reducing the same to writing.

To the second Interrogatory faith that John Doory to the best of this deponents Judgement was of sound memory when he gave this Deponent such Instructions to draw his will as aforesaid but before the whole Instructions was reduced to writing the said Doory talked Jolly but without he was giving Instructions for the said will that no interjectory words were used by him during the time of giving such instructions as aforesaid This Deponent faith that the said will was not read to the said Doory and immediately upon such instructions your Deponent went to reduce the aforesaid Instructions into form of a Will.

3
To the third interrogatory faith that the said John Doory at first did orde this Deponent by his instructions to nominate only Edinor Doory and Owen Quigley Executors of his said will without naming John Quigley and further faith that the said Edmund Dermott did twice or three times ask the said Deputy whether he would not remember his son Quigley or Capt. John Quigley whom upon after some pause the said Doory said put my son Quigley or Capt. Quigley one of my Executors to have an equal share with the others or words to that effect and the said Doory to the best of your deponents knowledge was of sound memory when he ordered this Deponent to put in the said Quigley to be one of the Executors of the said will.
